Terrapin.

Terrapin begin laying about the middle of May and hatch in about thirty days. The female terrapin scratches a hole in the sand with her fore paws, deposits her eggs, from thirteen to nineteen, in it and then covers them up and leaves the heat of the sun on the sand to hatch out the young terrapins. They are not much bigger when hatched than a man's thumb nail and are as soft as dough. They crawl around pretty lively and begin to hunt for their food, consisting of small fish, crabs, etc. The first summer they are quite small, and about the first of the middle of November they go into their winter quarters. These consist of some sort of mudhole in the marsh or on the bottom of some stream. Here they sleep until about the middle of April or later, when they come out and are of quite respectable size, say four inches in breadth. The next year they are six inches and the third seven inches in breadth. It is undoubtedly while the terrapin slumbers in the mud that he acquires the peculiar qualities for which we admire him. It is the only flesh known which one can crush in his mouth with his tongue without the aid of his teeth. The other animals run about, sleeping only at night. The terrapin sleeps night and day for six or seven months of the year and takes his night naps, too, for the balance of the year.—Baltimore Sun.

Pen Portrait of Grieg.

Here is as vivid a picture of Grieg the man as any that has yet been drawn. A correspondent who saw the noted Scandinavian composer when he received his honorary degree at Cambridge, in England, in 1894, makes it for the Manchester Guardian: "It was a sad and a strong face that we saw, one might almost have said a grimace, but that there was nothing of hardness in it, a face which must have inspired both respect and affection in all who met him. Yet as the little, old looking man stood there in the red and yellow gown of a doctor of music there was something incongruous about his appearance, the head, encircled with long, straight, white hair, appearing above the stiff, straighter lines of gaudy hipped silk, which descended to the ground in the form of a regular cone, and the simile of one visitor, who remarked that they made him look just like a peweeper, was irresistibly accurate."

Beer Capacity of a Munich Porter.

An English family touring in Bavaria called at the world famous Hofbrauhaus, the pride of Munich, writes our correspondent. To the waitress serving them the head of the family in a matter of fact way simply held up his five fingers. To the family's astonishment, the waitress came back with five quart pots filled to the brim with beer. The visitors bravely struggled with the beer, but managed to dispose of only about a quart between them. Knowing that it would be considered an insult to leave beer, they called a porter and ordered him to finish it. In less time than it takes to relate it the Bavarian accomplished the task. Wiping his mustache, he demanded the money, instantly ordered and emptied yet another quart pot.—London Mail.

A Waiter's Amazing Wail.

The waiter spoke indignantly.
"Men go about," he said, "complaining of being mistook for waiters, but it is on the other foot really that the shoe rests. Waiters are the real complainants in these cases of mistake on identity. Our kicks are sincere. The others' ring false. For at dances and balls and such like crushes many a young man makes money by being mistook for a waiter. How does he make money? Why, he is tipped, and all them tips he pockets, never thinking of handing them over to their rightful owners. At every big affair we count on a loss of 5 per cent through the dishonest advantage that impetuous young swells take of being mistook for waiters."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Savage Sense of Humor.

Lecturing on New Guinea, A. H. Dunning said he once offered a native some smelling salts. After going through extraordinary contortions the native went away, returning soon with another native, whom he compelled to make acquaintance with the salts. The two brought a third, and so on until the whole village had been victimized. The savages watched each new sufferer with the keenest delight and took good care not to let him know what fate awaited him.—London Standard.

He Sure Was a Man!

When William Allen rose up in the early seventies and surprised the country by being elected governor of Ohio on the Democratic ticket one of the obstacles he triumphed over was the charge of being an old man. He addressed a great meeting at Mozart hall in Cincinnati the night following the day in which this ill advised charge had been brought against him by a responsible Republican leader. Strong, vigorous and well preserved as he was and retaining unbroken that quality of voice which had designated him as "Foghorn Allen" when he was in the senate, he was still politician enough to use it for all it was worth to him. After stating the charge in all its belittleness he straightened himself to his full height of more than six feet and, beginning in a loud voice, asked, "Am I a man?" The next question was in a voice pitched a scale higher and asked, "Do I look like a man?" But the third, in which he put out all of his tremendous vocal power, thundered to shake the roof in roaring, "Do I talk like a man?" The audience was thrilled. Such high physical power in a man of that age appealed to it irresistibly.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fascination of Burglary.

"My champion burglar," said Mr. Holmes, the police court missionary, "is a bookbinder by trade, who has been in jail on and off for half a century." Mr. Holmes' ramifications with this chronic breaker of the law constitute an instructive scene for his work. He behaved to the erring bookbinder quite as a brother; the man had the entree of the house and enjoyed the friendship of the family. How was he in the habit of repaying this hospitality? By going out to burgle. Twice Mr. Holmes set him up, but in vain. The only charm that life has for this extraordinary being is the opportunity it vouchsafes for committing burglary.

"Why on earth don't you leave off burglary?" Mr. Holmes asked him once. "Mr. Holmes," was his reply, "there's no fascination in the world to equal it. The silence of the night, the element of danger, the need of keeping every sense on the alert—it's grand."—Cassell's Journal.

Dealing in "Cats and Dogs."

No antiquarian pursuing a more profitable or fascinating calling than the dealer in "cats and dogs," as the antiquities of Wall street are dubbed. "Cats and dogs" are the remnants of old stock, bond and note issues of railroad, industrial or mining companies on which payment of interest, dividends or principal has been in default for years. Some of these securities are worthless and obsolete, some of doubtful value, while a few are worth their weight in gold. Only the expert in obsolete securities can detect their worth. Many of these securities can be picked up at the official auction room of Wall street. Many brokers closely scrutinize the securities that are offered at this auction room, and only a few months ago 100,000 shares of stock in a certain mining company were sold for a song, from which the broker hopes to realize a big sum.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Phrases or Handcuffs.

It is customary to remark that modern problems cannot easily be attacked because they are so complex. In many cases, I believe, it is really because they are so simple. Nobody would believe in such simplicity of scoundrelism even if it were pointed out. People would say that the truth was a charge of mere melodramatic villainy, forgetting that nearly all villains really are melodramatic. Thus, for instance, we say that some good measures are frustrated or some bad officials kept in power by the press and confusion of public business, whereas very often the reason is simply healthy human bribery. We waste our fine intellects in finding exculpatory phraseology to fit a man when in a well ordered society we ought to be finding handcuffs to fit him.—G. K. Chesterton in Illustrated London News.

May Turn Black.

Professor McMillan Brown, ethnologist, holds that the future Australian people will in all probability be black. The Polynesians, he said in a lecture at Sydney, came originally not from America, as has been supposed, but from Asia. They were whites and changed color, just as the future Australian may do as the centuries go on, at least in the tropical regions of the north. The violet rays of the sun will turn him black in course of time.

Sorry He Spoke.

"Really, Miss Prim, you ought to get married," remarked Weddery. "You'll soon be in the spinster class if you don't hurry up and catch on."
"Oh, don't worry about me, Mr. Weddery," replied Miss Prim. "If I were as easy to please as your wife I would have been married long ago."—London Telegraph.

Some Other Fellow's.

"With $100,000," said the man of expensive ideas, "I could make a fortune in Wall Street."
"Yes," replied the plucker, "but whose fortune would you make?"—Washington Star.

An Apt Illustration.

Miss Kinky—What does white folks mean when they talk about paintin' de lily? Mr. Jackson—Dat's about de same as butterin' de po'k chop.—Kansas City Times.

Rely upon it that the man who does not worthily estimate his own debt to forefathers will himself do very little to add credit or do honor to his country.—William E. Gladstone.
